Riverside Investment and Development and co-development partner Convexity Properties signed Antares Capital to a long-term, 87,586-square-foot lease at the recently opened BMO Tower, 320 South Canal in Chicago. The deal brings the building to 68% leased.

“We continue to see strong interest in 320 South Canal since it provides an amenity rich, health focused, well-located property that creates a desirable environment for the employees of a firm like Antares,” said Riverside EVP Rafael Carreira.

Antares is relocating from 500 West Monroe, where it occupies 69,646 square feet. “As a company with roots in Chicago, we’re excited to be moving to a space that accommodates our growth plans and addresses the many different ways in which our employees work,” said Antares Capital CEO Timothy Lyne. Cushman & Wakefield’s Michael Sessa, Dan Maslauski and Jack Deroche represented Antares. Riverside was represented in-house by Christy Domin and Drew Neiman.
